Question 05

Read the following text and answer the questions given below.

There are several places in the world that are famous for people who live a very long time. These places arc usually in mountainous areas, far away from modern cities. Doctors, scientists, and public health experts often travel to these regions to solve the mystery of a long. healthy life: the experts hope to bring to the modern world the secrets of longevity.

Hunza is high in the Himalayan Mountains of Asia. There, many people over one hundred years of age are still in good physical health, Men of ninety are new fathers and women of fifty still have babies. What are the reasons for this good health? Scientists believe that the people of Hunza have these three benefits. Physical work, usually in the fields or with animals, a healthful environment with clean air and water and a simple diet high in vitamins and nutrition but low in fat, cholesterol, sugar and chemicals.

People in Caucasus Mountains in Russia are also famous for their longevity. In this area, there are amazing examples of very long -lived people. Birth records are not usually available but a woman called Tsurba probably lived until age 160: a man called Shirali probably lived until 168. His widow was 120 years old. In general the people not only live a longtime but they also live well. They are almost never sick, and when they die they have not only their own teeth but also a full head of hair, and good eye sight.

Vilcabamba, Ecuador, is another area famous for the longevity of its inhabitants. This region like Hunza and the Caucasus — is also in high mountains, far away from cities. In Vilcabama, too, there is very little serious disease. One reason for the good health of the people might be the clean, beautiful environment. The temperature is about 70° Fahrenheit all year long, the wind always comes from the same direction; the region is rich in flowers, fruits, vegetables and wildlife.

In some ways, the diets of the inhabitants in the three regions are quite different. Hunzukuts eat mainly raw vegetables, fruits (especially apricots) and chapatis - a kind of pancake; they seat meat only a few times a year. The Caucasian diet consists mainly of milk, cheese, vegetables, fruit and meat; most people drink the local red wine daily. In Vicabaamba, people eat a small amount of meat each week, but the diet consists largely of grain, corn, beans, potatoes, and fruit.

Experts found one surprising fact in the mountains of Eeuador: most people there, even the very old, consume a lot of coffee, drink large amount of alcohol, and smoke forty to sixty cigarette daily.

However, the diets are similar in two general ways. The fruits and vegetables that the inhabitants of the three areas eat are all natural. That is they contain no chemicals. And the people consume fewer calories than the people do in other parts of the world. A typical North American takes in an average of 3300 calories every day; a typical inhabitant of these mountains areas, between 1700 and 2000 calories.

Inhabitants in the three regions have more in common than calories, natural food, their mountains, and their distance from modern cities. Because these people five in the countryside and are mostly farmers, their lives are physically hard. Thus, they do not need to go to health clubs because they get a lot of exercise in their daily work. In addition, although their lives are hard, the people do not seem to have worries of the city people. Their lives are quiet. Consequently, some experts believe that physical exercise and freedom from worry might be the two most important secrets of longevity.
